

Request for Information: State-Level EV Planning Documents for Online Clearinghouse

NASEO, in partnership with the U.S. Department of Energy, National Renewable Energy Laboratory, American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials (AASHTO), ICF, and Atlas Public Policy, is developing an EV State Planning Clearinghouse, a one-stop-shop for state agencies as they plan for and implement electric vehicle (EV) infrastructure programs under the Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act. This password-protected website will include EV program documents from states (e.g., model RFPs, staffing and budgetary models, etc.), EV siting and assessment tools, a “Frequently Asked Questions” document, and other resources that states may use as they build-out a nationwide network of EV charging stations.

NASEO is seeking program documents and resources that states have used during their EV planning process for our EV State Planning Clearinghouse. NASEO invites you to submit resources that your office has used (either recently or in the past few years) when standing-up EV infrastructure programs. These could be published materials and non-sensitive internal materials. Examples include:

- Requests for Proposals
- Requests for Information
- Requests for Quotation
- Requests for Applications
- Grant contracts, state-vendor contracts, and other contractual models
- Scoring rubrics, evaluation criteria, and other grant selection criteria
- EV charging station standards (e.g., accessibility standards, signage best practices, etc.)
- EV charging station operation processes (e.g., financing model, payment options, etc.)
- Templates for stakeholder engagement
- Job descriptions, staffing, and budgetary models
- Siting assessments and tools (e.g., health/emissions assessments, gap analyses)
- Project proposals
- EV plans or other EV planning documents
- Planning or policy documents from regional EV collaborations
- Links to online resources, toolkits or EV infrastructure program-specific webpage(s)
- Other materials

Please submit documents and resources to Cassie Powers (cpowers@naseo.org) by Wednesday, February 2. NASEO and our project partners intend to launch a beta version of the website in mid-February, and will be collecting additional resources as they become available. Please contact Cassie with any questions.
